RESTORATION OF LEAVE

1. Supervisors and managers are requested to remind their employees that in accordance with personnel and payroll regulations, annual leave credits in excess of the maximum accumulation amount will be forfeited at the end of the leave year. The maximum annual leave accumulation is 240 hours. The NAF leave year ends 12 Jan 2012.
2. Before annual leave subject to forfeiture may be considered for restoration, it must have been requested and disapproved in writing before the end of the third pay period (last quarter CY 11) prior to the end of the leave year. For NAF employees, the deadline is 30 Sep 2011.
3. While there are provisions for restoration of excess annual leave forfeited at the end of the leave year, the criteria for restoration of forfeited annual leave are very strict and can only be made on the basis of:
 - a. correction of an administrative error;
 - b. employee sickness which interfered with the use of annual leave scheduled for use in advance and which could not be rescheduled for use during the leave year;
 - c. Operational situations caused by exigencies of the public business when the annual leave was scheduled in advance (advance scheduling is not required for certain mission essential employees in a combat zone).
4. Restoration under the provisions of c. above generally causes the most confusion. To apply this paragraph the leave must have been scheduled and approved but then later canceled because of an operational exigency declared by the commander. The commander's declaration must include a beginning date of the emergency and a date on which it will end. When the leave is subsequently lost, the employee can then request restoration.
5. Failure by employees to comply with the requirements for requesting and scheduling the use of excess annual leave will preclude favorable consideration of a restoration request at a later date. It is strongly suggested that supervisors and managers require their employees to inform them of how much excess leave they have and to require a written schedule for its use before the end of the leave year.

6. Employees must use their restored leave within two years after the end of the calendar year in which the leave is restored.

7. Employees must remember to first use their restored leave prior to requesting annual and/or sick leave. Leave request form OPM 71 has a specific field for requesting restored annual leave. There is also a special place for timekeepers to record restored annual leave on the time card.

8. The NAF HRO is available to provide any additional guidance and assistance. Please call us at 531-6301.

Control Your Pay With myPay!

<https://mypay.dfas.mil>

What kind of shopper are you? Do you think you are a savvy shopper always looking for a deal? Do you try to get the most out of the money that you spend? If so that is great. Well, grocery shopping is no different. You still want to be a savvy shopper in the supermarket, and look out for special deals and obviously get your money's worth. Being a savvy grocery shopper takes some skill and practice. Some questions come to mind when evaluating what kind of grocery shopper you are. For instance, do you have a grocery list? Does your shopping cart have mostly prepackaged foods? Do you shop on an empty stomach? All these questions are significant because they play an important part in healthy eating. Healthy eating starts with healthy food shopping, and you do not want your body to pay the price for poor decisions you make in the grocery store. Here are some tips to help you become that savvy grocery shopper:

1. The process starts even before you head to the grocery store. Before you set out to go to the grocery store, plan your meals for the week, and create a list to shop from. By doing this you will eliminate getting things you do not need and save time and money.
2. Another important tip to remember is to grocery shop according to the MyPyramid guidelines. To help meet the pyramid guidelines, you should fill your cart with plenty of fruits, vegetables, whole grains, dairy, lean meat, fish, poultry, beans and nuts. For more information on MyPyramid guidelines visit www.mypyramid.gov.
3. Shop the perimeter of the store and try to avoid filling up your cart with too many products from the middle aisles. When shopping the perimeter of the store you will find fresh produce, meat and dairy. You want to spend the most time in the produce section, which is usually the first area you encounter in most grocery stores, and usually the largest. Here is where you will get essential vitamins, minerals, and phytonutrient content from the colorful rainbow of fruits and vegetables. It is also beneficial to be adventurous in this section of the grocery store and try a new fruit once in awhile. Try papaya, pomegranate, or kiwi when in season. When you find yourself in the meat, fish and poultry section keep in mind certain recommendations such as the American Heart Association guidelines that states, eating fish two times a week is beneficial for your heart. This would be a great opportunity to pick up some salmon which is widely available and an excellent source of omega-3 fatty acids (good fat). When choosing meat opt for lean cuts such as round, top sirloin, and tenderloins and for ground beef, go as lean as possible with a ratio of 90/10, 95/5, or 97/3. When choosing poultry choose skinless, breast, and thighs. Completing the perimeter of the grocery store you will find yourself in the dairy section. Here is where you want to choose reduced fat, preferably low fat options of milk, cheese, and yogurt.

Once you have made your way through the perimeter of the store, now you can take on the middle aisles. Already in your cart you have fresh produce full of vitamins and minerals, excellent sources of protein from lean cuts of meat, fish, and poultry, and calcium rich foods from low fat milk, yogurt and cheese. The middle aisles are where you want to spend the least amount of time. There are still healthy options in these aisles you just have to know which ones they are. Here are some recommendations when shopping the middle aisles.

1. If you start with the frozen food section you can find anything from vegetables to ice cream. This section of the grocery store is convenient because most foods are already prepared and only need reheating, that can be a common pitfall because such convenient foods are loaded with salt. So if you were to shop the frozen food aisle shop for fruits and vegetables to fill the produce gap, especially when certain fruits and vegetables are out of season.
2. The next aisles are your breads, cereals, pasta, and rice. In these aisles you want to choose breads made with 100% whole grains and not simply 100% whole wheat. That is why it is important to read the nutrition fact label. You also want to look for breads that have at least three grams of fiber per serving. In the cereal aisle look for varieties made with whole grains, have six grams of sugar or less and contain at least five grams of fiber per serving. When choosing pasta try whole wheat pasta for a change. It is not as bad as you may think. An excellent brand that does not alter taste and holds pasta sauces well is Barilla®. When choosing rice, try brown rice, long grain rice, or even wild rice.

- 3. Canned fruits and vegetables is another aisle that has viable options. Canned vegetables for instance, are great to add in soups, salads, and pasta, just keep in mind to watch the sodium content. When buying canned fruit look for varieties packed in their own juices or water.

Bottom line: Being a savvy grocery shopper takes practice and within time the sequence of how you grocery shopper will reflect your healthy lifestyle. Be sure to keep these tips in mind on your next trip to the grocery store, and one last word of advice eat a snack or a meal prior to grocery shopping to avoid buying junk food.
